Habitat Ecological Restoration

Commonly termed 'revegetation', Ecological Restoration rehabilitates disturbed sites to restore native flora and fauna values. However, simply replanting native plants is not Ecological Restoration. Failure to understand the complex relationships between flora and fauna at all levels will result in disappointment and on-going remedial costs for your development project.

Calling upon our environment scientists, botanists and ecologists to assist in planning, design and construction, Habitat Ecological Restoration also backs up the science with practised environmental regenerators to actually conduct the on-ground works.
